- Dr. Leonard Coldwell exposes the medical-industrial complex for profiting from chronic illness rather than curing it, arguing that treatments like chemotherapy mask symptoms while harming the body.

- He asserts that cancer and autoimmune conditions stem from emotional trauma, chronic stress or toxicity – not viruses – and labels germ theory a fraud used to sell fear-based interventions.

- Coldwell advocates for his Instinct-Based Medicine System (IBMS), emphasizing detoxification, instinct and addressing root causes (e.g., raw sugar cane juice for cancer) over pharmaceuticals.

- He identifies fear as the "real pandemic" exploited by media, governments and Big Pharma, and urges self-empowerment and rejection of fear-based narratives.

- Coldwell's core message: Individuals must take responsibility for their health through intuition, natural remedies and emotional/spiritual balance – not dependency on the medical system.

Renowned holistic health expert and cancer patient advocate Dr. Leonard Coldwell revealed shocking truths about the medical-industrial complex, the root causes of disease and the innate healing power within each individual during his appearance on "Decentralize TV."

His discussion with the Health Ranger Mike Adams and Todd Pitner, the program's hosts, exposed how the system profits from keeping people sick rather than curing them.

Coldwell, whose personal journey began when his mother was diagnosed with terminal liver cancer, shared how he defied medical predictions and healed her naturally – even extending her life by nearly five decades. His experience led him to develop the Instinct-Based Medicine System (IBMS), a revolutionary approach that identifies and eliminates the root causes of illness rather than merely suppressing symptoms.

"Cancer is not really an illness," Coldwell explained. "It's a condition. It's an accumulation of symptoms."

Coldwell, who holds the title of the most blocked healer from social media, continued that chemotherapy and radiation only mask symptoms while destroying the body. True healing, he added, comes from addressing the root cause – often chronic stress, emotional trauma or self-sabotage. Cancer and other autoimmune diseases stem from internal conflict, where the body attacks itself due to unresolved emotional or psychological distress. The medical mafia's deadly agenda and the power of self-healing

Coldwell didn't hold back in condemning the pharmaceutical and medical industries. He cited Dr. Gary Null's seven-year study that concluded that modern medicine is the leading cause of death in the Western world.

"The main cause of illness is the pharmaceutical industry," he said. According to Coldwell, Big Pharma doesn't want cures for people – only repeat customers.

He also debunked the germ theory as "fraudulent," explaining that so-called viruses are actually exosomes – the body's natural detoxification process. When a cell becomes toxic, it expels waste in tiny sacs. Given this, sickness is just the body cleaning itself – but modern medicine calls these sacs "viruses" to sell fear and vaccines.

Ultimately, Coldwell asserted that only the individual can cure themselves. He explained to Adams and Pitner that the same person who made you sick – you yourself – is the same one who can heal you. Coldwell also stressed the importance of instinct, calling it "God talking to us" and urging people to trust their intuition rather than blindly following medical authorities.

Debunking the lies about nutrition and toxins

Coldwell also tackled dietary myths, explaining that processed foods, fluoride and artificial medications poison the body. Nicotine itself isn't addictive, but the chemicals in cigarettes create dependency.

He also noted that coffee is anti-aging and prevents dementia; Coldwell himself drinks eight to 12 cups daily. Sugar cane juice in its raw, organic form can reverse cancer in just 21 days.

Ultimately, Pitner raised a critical point: Fear is the real pandemic. Coldwell agreed, noting that the media, governments and Big Pharma use fear to control people. In turn, demons and evil entities feed on this fear and become stronger.

His solution? Reject fear, embrace self-confidence, and take control of your health. True healing comes from within – through instinct, self-love and natural remedies.
